CANDLE IN THE WIND*

One of the most famous celebrities ever to come out of Hollywood was Marilyn Monroe. Born Norma Jean Baker in 1926, Monroe made around 30 films in 13 years. Although she was often given the role of a dumb blonde, Monroe was in fact a talented actress with a natural gift for comedy. Once, when asked by a journalist; "Didn't you have anything on?", her replay was; "I had the radio on". Despite her image, she had an appetite for books, reading Dostoesvsky, for example, in her spare time.

Every detail of her life was scrutinized by journalists trying to dig up gossip about her. In real life, she was a shy, troubled person, but at the requests of the studios she worked for, she made many public appearances.

The pressures of Hollywood and a chain of broken relationships, which included three failed marriages, affected her deeply.

Monroe's premature and mysterious death in 1961 turned her from a start into a legend and cult figure. There have been conflicting theories about how and why she died (ranking from the official report of suicide to murder).

Monroe's name was linked with presidents, film stars, baseballs heroes and playwrights. Many books have been written about her life and death. The most recent one is a book by her sister Bernice who argues that most of what have been written about her is untrue; including the claim that she committed suicide.

Whatever the truth is, for many people Marilyn remains a symbol of Hollywood's exploitation of beauty and youth.
